Training

The division was trained at Fort Knox, Kentucky, July 15, 1940. It was an experiment in a self-supporting, permanent fighting unit with tanks as the nucleus. This experiment in a self-sustaining blitzkrieg force had never been tried before, and the troops necessary for such an organization were drawn from many army posts.

When the organization was completed, the division had tanks, artillery and infantry in strength. In direct support were tank destroyer, maintenance, medical, supply and engineer battalions. But bringing the division up to its full quota of tanks, guns and vehicles was difficult. Although new equipment was received almost daily, the division had until March 1941, only nine ancient medium tanks. Principal armament of the nine was a 37-millimeter gun.

Fort Knox in 1940 was not unlike other army posts in the nation. There were a few minor differences—the high-crowned overseas cap was worn on the left side of the head, and the few experimental models of the quarter-ton truck that were then on the post were called "peeps" to distinguish them from the command car which had always been called a "jeep" by armored men.

To become expert with their newly acquired tanks, half-tracks and guns, most of the division attended the Armored Force School at Knox. The students stood reveille at 4 a.m., sat at attention during class and at 4 p.m. rushed to the nearest post exchange for a bottle of beer, which helped counteract the hot summer weather.

Every day, some unit attacked from the steel observation tower called 'O.P. Six' to capture some part of a 25 square mile patch of Kentucky brush and gullies. The troops made three-day road marches, scraped and polished their vehicles for Saturday morning inspections, sweated out the lines at the bus station and occasionally dropped by Benny's or Big Nell's, the most easily accessible civilian nightspots.[citation needed]

With more than a year's training behind them, the division left in September 1941, for three months' maneuvers in Louisiana. The day before Pearl Harbor, the division was back at Fort Knox. The draftees had proved themselves as soldiers in the maneuvers. They looked forward to discharges after their year's service. The regular army men expected furloughs.[citation needed]

Training took on a new intensity. The division was reorganized, and all tanks, both medium and light were put into two armored regiments, the 1st and 13th. A third armored field artillery battalion, the 91st, was formed, and the 701st Tank Destroyer Battalion was organized and attached to the division.

At Fort Knox, the division participated in the Technicolor short movie The Tanks Are Coming (as the "First Armored Force"). It deployed to participate in the VII Corps Maneuvers on 18 August 1941. Once the maneuvers concluded, 1st Armored Division then moved on 28 August 1941, and arrived at Camp Polk for the Second Army Louisiana Maneuvers on 1 September 1941. They then moved to Fort Jackson on 30 October 1941 to participate in the First Army Carolina Maneuvers. 1st AD then returned to Fort Knox on 7 December 1941, but started to prepare for deployment overseas instead of returning to garrison.

A few months later, in March 1942, the division was en route to the Fort Dix, New Jersey, staging area under command of Major General Orlando Ward. General Ward relieved Major General Bruce R. Magruder, who had commanded the division since its organization. It was a "secret" move, but no surprise to the towns people of Washington Court House, Ohio, who had waited four days for the division to arrive. There were movies, food, hot water for shaving and a mammoth banner saying "Welcome First Armored Division" across the main street. At Dix there were 36-hour passes to New York and motor parks jammed with division vehicles. Nobody knew when or where the division was going.[citation needed]

The trip was to Northern Ireland, and the division landed in May and June. Training for the next few months was even more rigid and exacting than during the last months in the United States. The men were mentally and physically at their best. The general feeling was one of impatience.[citation needed]

At the end of the training period Combat Command "B", with about one-half of the division's troops, was alerted to leave Ireland and prepare for an overseas trip where "... You'll get off fighting." [citation needed]

Alerted for the invasion were the 1st Battalion of the 1st Armored Regiment, the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 13th Armored Regiment, nearly all the 6th Armored Infantry Regiment, the 27th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, "B" and "C" Companies of the 701st Tank Destroyer Battalion, and detachments of the 16th Armored Engineer Battalion, the Supply Battalion, the Maintenance Battalion, 47th Armored Medical Battalion and the 141st Signal Company.

Combat operations

The 1st Armored Division was ordered to Fort Dix on 11 April 1942 to await their deployment overseas. The division's port call required them to board the RMS Queen Mary at the New York Port of Embarkation at the Brooklyn Army Terminal on 11 May 1942. They arrived at Northern Ireland on 16 May 1942, and trained on the moors until they moved on to England on 29 October 1942. The division was now commanded by Major General Orlando Ward.

The M5 Stuart tank was used by Iron Soldiers during World War II.

The unit's first contact with an enemy was as part of the Allied invasion of Northwest Africa, Operation Torch, on 8 November 1942. Elements of the division were part of the Northern Task Force and became the first American armored division to see combat in World War II. Combat Command B (CCB) of the division landed east and west of Oran under the command of Brigadier General Lunsford E. Oliver, and entered the city on 10 November 1942. On 24 November 1942, CCB moved from Tafaroui, Algeria to Bedja, Tunisia, and raided Djedeida airfield the next day. Djedeida was finally conquered on 28 November 1942. CCB moved southwest of Tebourba on 1 December 1942, engaged German forces on El Guessa Heights on 3 December 1942, but its lines were pierced on 6 December 1942. CCB withdrew to Bedja with heavy equipment losses between 10 and 11 December 1942, and was placed in reserve. CCB next attacked in the Ousseltia Valley on 21 January 1943, and cleared that area until 29 January 1943 when sent to Bou Chebka, and arrived at Maktar on 14 February 1943.

Combat Command A (CCA) fought at Faid Pass commencing on 30 January 1943, and advanced to Sidi Bou Zid, where it was pushed back with heavy tank losses on 14 February 1943, and had elements isolated on Djebel Lessouda, Djebel Kasaira, and Garet Hadid. Combat Command C (CCC), which had been constituted on 23 January 1943 to raid Sened Station on 24 January, advanced towards Sbeitia, and counterattacked to support CCA in the Sidi Bou Zid area on 15 February 1943, but was repulsed with heavy losses. The division withdrew from Sbeitia on 16 February 1943, but – by 21 February 1943 CCB contained the German attack toward Tebessa. The German withdrawal allowed the division to recover Kasserine Pass on 26 February 1943 and assemble in reserve. The division moved northeast of Gafsa on 13 March 1943 and attacked in heavy rains on 17 March 1943 as CCA took Zannouch, but became immobilized by rain the next day. The division drove on Maknassy on 20 March 1943, and fought the Battle of Djebel Naemia on 22–25 March 1943, and then fought to break through positions barring the road to Gabès between 29 March and 1 April 1943. It began to follow up the withdrawing German forces on 6 April 1943, and attacked towards Mateur with CCA on 27 April 1943, which fell after hard fighting on Hill 315 and Hill 299 on 3 May 1943. The division, now commanded by Major General Ernest N. Harmon, fought the Battle for Djebel Achtel between 5 and 11 May 1943, and entered Ferryville on 7 May 1943. The German and Italian forces in Tunisia surrendered between 9 and 13 May 1943. The division was reorganized in French Morocco, and began arriving in Naples, Italy on 28 October 1943.

This exhibit at the 1st Armored Division and Fort Bliss museum depicts the type of bivouac site used by Iron Soldier in North Africa in WWII. Soldiers slept in cloth tents and carried chests of equipment and stoves.

After the Allied invasion of Sicily, the unit, part of the American Fifth Army, invaded mainland Italy. It took part in the attack on the Winter Line in November 1943. It then flanked the Axis armies in the landings at Anzio, and then passed through the city of Rome and pursued the retreating enemy northward until mid-July 1944. At that point, Major General Harmon was replaced by Major General Vernon Prichard, who led the 1st AD for the rest of the war. Three days after Prichard took command, the division was reorganized, based on experiences in the North Africa Campaign.[citation needed] The change was drastic. It eliminated the armored and infantry regiments in favor of three separate tank and infantry battalions, disbanded the Supply Battalion, and cut the strength of the division from 14,000 to 10,000. The result of the re-organization was a more flexible and balanced division, with roughly equivalent infantry and tank battalions. These forces could be combined or custom-tailored by the command to meet any situation. The additional infantry strength would prove particularly useful in the future campaigns in the largely mountainous combat of the Italian campaign. The division continued in combat to the Po Valley until the German forces in Italy surrendered on 2 May 1945. In June, the division moved to Germany as part of the occupation forces.

Casualties

Total battle casualties: 7,096[25]

Killed in action: 1,194[25]

Wounded in action: 5,168[25]

Missing in action: 216[25]

Prisoner of war: 518[25]

The division received 5,478 Purple Hearts. Two division soldiers were awarded the Medal of Honor during World War II, Private Nicholas Minue and Second Lieutenant Thomas Weldon Fowler.

The 1st Armored Division flag returned to the New York Port of Embarkation on 24 April 1946, and was inactivated at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey on 25 April 1946. The component headquarters and units stayed in Germany were retasked and renamed as a component of the United States Constabulary.

"Dad never talked to much about Korea but it's fairly easy to tell you. He got his knee cap blown off while hauling wounded to the " meat wagon" that's his term. He said even after hit he still somehow managed to get others out of the line of fire. He said he was everybody's friend because he had the morphine. He said he laid on the cold frozen ground all nite with one wool blanket. Thought he was gonna freeze to death. Then he was flown to Tokyo then on to Weisbaden, Germany for a long stint in the hospital. His leg was virtually wired together and that is how he lived with it the rest of his life it was stiff for a year. Somehow he bent it I heard several friends say.
Not sure how you stand the pain or how you walk on it but there was nothing they could do for it. I have the letter he wrote grandma after he got hit somewhere. He carried his rosary with him everywhere. He said he had a bugle and short sword tied to his boot but it disappeared when he was wounded. He used to say when he would occasionally watch footage from Korea if you would see that brass bugle and sword tied to his boot it was him. He took them from an enemy soldier that's all I know about that. He worked at the post office in York Ne after he was home and better enough to work."

CHILD 1 - Alexander Santonastaso

Alexander Boyd Santonastaso went to his Heavenly Home on Oct. 1, 2019 at 4:29 a.m., in the presence of his loving family. Alexander Boyd was born sleeping due to complications from Trisomy 18. While he was alive inside his mother, Alexander Boyd showed that he was a fighter, by making it 31 weeks and 3 days. Alexander Boyd's conception surprised us. His condition shocked us. His tenacity and beauty and delicate life inspired us. His short life was predicted and lovingly told by his care givers and his God, but his leaving was still sudden and too soon. He was a gift from God.

Alexander Boyd solidified our convictions. He increased our faith. Helped us increase our love for humanity and made us more thankful for each day that we are given on this earth by God. He reminded us of our own weaknesses. We long to see Alexander Boyd again. "...God has chosen the weak things of the world to shame the things which are strong...(1 Corinthians 1:27)."

Alexander Boyd is survived by his parents Trisha and Mike Santonastaso, three sisters; Jackie Zirkle, Hailey, and Olivia Santonastaso, five brothers; Philip, Nathanael, Andrew, Joseph and Jonathan Santonastaso, one brother in law; Tyler Zirkle, maternal grandparents; Debra and Bruce Hyatt III, fraternal grandparents; Lorna and Mike Santonastaso and great grandparents Ruth Murphy and Bruce Hyatt Sr., aunts and uncles; Kristy and Shannon Pittman, Kevin and Jodi Hyatt, Michelle and Steve Teachout, Tony and Carrie Santonastaso, cousins; Tayllor and Dyllan Pittman, Charles and Jackson Hyatt, Emma and Molly Teachout, Noel and Issac Santonastaso, and nephews Torbin and Cayson Zirkle.

Alexander Boyd was preceded in death by great grandparents Josephine and Boyd Murphy, Jackie Hyatt, Mattie and Jim Smith, and Rose and Philip Santonastaso.

Alexander Boyd's life will be celebrated in early summer

HUSBAND - Edward C. Faust

Ed Faust's military duty was very short. He was only in the service for four months. He was forced to leave the Army due to severe Asthma. He trained at Fort Knox for a quick strike unit that supported a tank group. The following is historical information about the military unit he trained with and the action he would have been involved in if he had been able to stay in the service.

History

On July 15, 1940, the 1st Armored Division, largely an expanded and reorganized version of the 7th Cavalry Brigade, was activated at Fort Knox under the command of Major General Bruce Magruder. The 1st Cavalry Regiment was redesignated as 1st Armored Regiment and 13th Cavalry Regiment was redesignated as 13th Armored Regiment under the 1st Armored Brigade, 1st Armored Division.[21] For more than two years after its activation, the 1st Armored Division trained at Fort Knox and the division pioneered and developed tank gunnery and strategic armored offensives while increasing from 66 medium-sized tanks to over 600 medium and light armored vehicles.[21]

Order of battle

The first order of battle for the 1st Armored Division was: [22][23]

HHC, 1st Armored Division

HHC, 1st Armored Brigade

1st Armored Regiment (Light)

13th Armored Regiment (Light)

69th Armored Regiment (Medium)

81st Armored Reconnaissance Squadron

6th Armored Infantry Regiment

68th Armored Field Artillery Regiment

27th Field Artillery Battalion (Armored)

16th Engineer Battalion (Armored)

13th Quartermaster Battalion (Armored)

19th Ordnance Battalion (Armored)

47th Medical Battalion (Armored)

141st Signal Company (Armored)

On 15 April 1941 the division sent a cadre to form the 4th Armored Division at Pine Camp, New York.

World War II

Commanders

MG Bruce Magruder (July 1940 – March 1942),[24]

MG Orlando Ward (March 1942 – April 1943),

MG Ernest N. Harmon (April 1943 – July 1944),

MG Vernon Prichard (July 1944 – September 1945),

MG Roderick R. Allen (September 1945 – January 1946),

MG Hobart R. Gay (February 1946 to inactivation).

Training

The division was trained at Fort Knox, Kentucky, July 15, 1940. It was an experiment in a self-supporting, permanent fighting unit with tanks as the nucleus. This experiment in a self-sustaining blitzkrieg force had never been tried before, and the troops necessary for such an organization were drawn from many army posts.

When the organization was completed, the division had tanks, artillery and infantry in strength. In direct support were tank destroyer, maintenance, medical, supply and engineer battalions. But bringing the division up to its full quota of tanks, guns and vehicles was difficult. Although new equipment was received almost daily, the division had until March 1941, only nine ancient medium tanks. Principal armament of the nine was a 37-millimeter gun.

Fort Knox in 1940 was not unlike other army posts in the nation. There were a few minor differences—the high-crowned overseas cap was worn on the left side of the head, and the few experimental models of the quarter-ton truck that were then on the post were called "peeps" to distinguish them from the command car which had always been called a "jeep" by armored men.

To become expert with their newly acquired tanks, half-tracks and guns, most of the division attended the Armored Force School at Knox. The students stood reveille at 4 a.m., sat at attention during class and at 4 p.m. rushed to the nearest post exchange for a bottle of beer, which helped counteract the hot summer weather.

Every day, some unit attacked from the steel observation tower called 'O.P. Six' to capture some part of a 25 square mile patch of Kentucky brush and gullies. The troops made three-day road marches, scraped and polished their vehicles for Saturday morning inspections, sweated out the lines at the bus station and occasionally dropped by Benny's or Big Nell's, the most easily accessible civilian nightspots.[citation needed]

With more than a year's training behind them, the division left in September 1941, for three months' maneuvers in Louisiana. The day before Pearl Harbor, the division was back at Fort Knox. The draftees had proved themselves as soldiers in the maneuvers. They looked forward to discharges after their year's service. The regular army men expected furloughs.[citation needed]

Training took on a new intensity. The division was reorganized, and all tanks, both medium and light were put into two armored regiments, the 1st and 13th. A third armored field artillery battalion, the 91st, was formed, and the 701st Tank Destroyer Battalion was organized and attached to the division.

At Fort Knox, the division participated in the Technicolor short movie The Tanks Are Coming (as the "First Armored Force"). It deployed to participate in the VII Corps Maneuvers on 18 August 1941. Once the maneuvers concluded, 1st Armored Division then moved on 28 August 1941, and arrived at Camp Polk for the Second Army Louisiana Maneuvers on 1 September 1941. They then moved to Fort Jackson on 30 October 1941 to participate in the First Army Carolina Maneuvers. 1st AD then returned to Fort Knox on 7 December 1941, but started to prepare for deployment overseas instead of returning to garrison.

A few months later, in March 1942, the division was en route to the Fort Dix, New Jersey, staging area under command of Major General Orlando Ward. General Ward relieved Major General Bruce R. Magruder, who had commanded the division since its organization. It was a "secret" move, but no surprise to the towns people of Washington Court House, Ohio, who had waited four days for the division to arrive. There were movies, food, hot water for shaving and a mammoth banner saying "Welcome First Armored Division" across the main street. At Dix there were 36-hour passes to New York and motor parks jammed with division vehicles. Nobody knew when or where the division was going.[citation needed]

The trip was to Northern Ireland, and the division landed in May and June. Training for the next few months was even more rigid and exacting than during the last months in the United States. The men were mentally and physically at their best. The general feeling was one of impatience.[citation needed]

At the end of the training period Combat Command "B", with about one-half of the division's troops, was alerted to leave Ireland and prepare for an overseas trip where "... You'll get off fighting." [citation needed]

Alerted for the invasion were the 1st Battalion of the 1st Armored Regiment, the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 13th Armored Regiment, nearly all the 6th Armored Infantry Regiment, the 27th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, "B" and "C" Companies of the 701st Tank Destroyer Battalion, and detachments of the 16th Armored Engineer Battalion, the Supply Battalion, the Maintenance Battalion, 47th Armored Medical Battalion and the 141st Signal Company.

Combat operations

The 1st Armored Division was ordered to Fort Dix on 11 April 1942 to await their deployment overseas. The division's port call required them to board the RMS Queen Mary at the New York Port of Embarkation at the Brooklyn Army Terminal on 11 May 1942. They arrived at Northern Ireland on 16 May 1942, and trained on the moors until they moved on to England on 29 October 1942. The division was now commanded by Major General Orlando Ward.

The M5 Stuart tank was used by Iron Soldiers during World War II.

The unit's first contact with an enemy was as part of the Allied invasion of Northwest Africa, Operation Torch, on 8 November 1942. Elements of the division were part of the Northern Task Force and became the first American armored division to see combat in World War II. Combat Command B (CCB) of the division landed east and west of Oran under the command of Brigadier General Lunsford E. Oliver, and entered the city on 10 November 1942. On 24 November 1942, CCB moved from Tafaroui, Algeria to Bedja, Tunisia, and raided Djedeida airfield the next day. Djedeida was finally conquered on 28 November 1942. CCB moved southwest of Tebourba on 1 December 1942, engaged German forces on El Guessa Heights on 3 December 1942, but its lines were pierced on 6 December 1942. CCB withdrew to Bedja with heavy equipment losses between 10 and 11 December 1942, and was placed in reserve. CCB next attacked in the Ousseltia Valley on 21 January 1943, and cleared that area until 29 January 1943 when sent to Bou Chebka, and arrived at Maktar on 14 February 1943.

Combat Command A (CCA) fought at Faid Pass commencing on 30 January 1943, and advanced to Sidi Bou Zid, where it was pushed back with heavy tank losses on 14 February 1943, and had elements isolated on Djebel Lessouda, Djebel Kasaira, and Garet Hadid. Combat Command C (CCC), which had been constituted on 23 January 1943 to raid Sened Station on 24 January, advanced towards Sbeita, and counterattacked to support CCA in the Sidi Bou Zid area on 15 February 1943, but was repulsed with heavy losses. The division withdrew from Sbeita on 16 February 1943, but – by 21 February 1943 CCB contained the German attack toward Tebessa. The German withdrawal allowed the division to recover Kasserine Pass on 26 February 1943 and assemble in reserve. The division moved northeast of Gafsa on 13 March 1943 and attacked in heavy rains on 17 March 1943 as CCA took Zannouch, but became immobilized by rain the next day. The division drove on Maknassy on 20 March 1943, and fought the Battle of Djebel Naemia on 22–25 March 1943, and then fought to break through positions barring the road to Gabès between 29 March and 1 April 1943. It began to follow up the withdrawing German forces on 6 April 1943, and attacked towards Mateur with CCA on 27 April 1943, which fell after hard fighting on Hill 315 and Hill 299 on 3 May 1943. The division, now commanded by Major General Ernest N. Harmon, fought the Battle for Djebel Achtel between 5 and 11 May 1943, and entered Ferryville on 7 May 1943. The German and Italian forces in Tunisia surrendered between 9 and 13 May 1943. The division was reorganized in French Morocco, and began arriving in Naples, Italy on 28 October 1943.

This exhibit at the 1st Armored Division and Fort Bliss museum depicts the type of bivouac site used by Iron Soldier in North Africa in WWII. Soldiers slept in cloth tents and carried chests of equipment and stoves.

After the Allied invasion of Sicily, the unit, part of the American Fifth Army, invaded mainland Italy. It took part in the attack on the Winter Line in November 1943. It then flanked the Axis armies in the landings at Anzio, and then passed through the city of Rome and pursued the retreating enemy northward until mid-July 1944. At that point, Major General Harmon was replaced by Major General Vernon Prichard, who led the 1st AD for the rest of the war. Three days after Prichard took command, the division was reorganized, based on experiences in the North Africa Campaign.[citation needed] The change was drastic. It eliminated the armored and infantry regiments in favor of three separate tank and infantry battalions, disbanded the Supply Battalion, and cut the strength of the division from 14,000 to 10,000. The result of the re-organization was a more flexible and balanced division, with roughly equivalent infantry and tank battalions. These forces could be combined or custom-tailored by the command to meet any situation. The additional infantry strength would prove particularly useful in the future campaigns in the largely mountainous combat of the Italian campaign. The division continued in combat to the Po Valley until the German forces in Italy surrendered on 2 May 1945. In June, the division moved to Germany as part of the occupation forces.

During the war, the Old Ironsides division captured 41 towns and cities and 108,740 prisoners. 722 division soldiers were awarded the Silver Star, 908 received the Bronze Star. The division received 5,478 Purple Hearts. Two division soldiers were awarded the Medal of Honor during World War II, Private Nicholas Minue and Second Lieutenant

Deaf parents and hearing children: No problem

By NANCY HICKS / Lincoln Journal Star

Monday, Aug 08, 2005 - 12:19:03 am CDT

The children of deaf parents typically learn to speak verbally as well as other children, often from other family members, according to studies and anecdotes.

People reading a recent Journal Star story about a custody battle over the hearing child of a deaf couple might come away thinking deaf people aren't capable of raising a hearing child. In fact, some say, while there are the normal problems of adolescence, the children of deaf parents often grow up with the benefit of being bilingual and bicultural.

When Frances Beaurivage was a little girl, her family had an unwritten code. "You spoke with speaking people, and you signed with deaf people." That's just the way it was. As the hearing child of deaf parents, she lived with two languages and two cultures. When Beaurivage was a toddler, she learned to make pictures with her hands in the language her dad used. And she learned to speak words, listening to her mom and other family members.

Later, when her parents divorced and her father remarried, she would live with two deaf parents. Frances and her three younger siblings became fluent in American Sign Language. They were bilingual. Today Beaurivage, 54, still straddles both cultures. She is a professional interpreter and works at Boys Town Research Hospital evaluating people who will interpret in school settings.

The deaf culture tends to be more physical, so she hugs her friends who are deaf and shakes hands with her hearing friends. And she cherishes her acceptance in both cultures.

Lisa Schiffbauer also learned American Sign Language and spoken English at the same time as a toddler. And she had no clue her family was different until her early grade school years when she first noticed that not everyone's parents were deaf.

"My parents were normal to me. I knew that I signed and spoke English. There was nothing strange or different about that," said Schiffbauer, 19, a student at Southeast Community College. Lisa and her older sister, Jamie Olsen, said they were concerned about the public's reaction to a recent Journal Star story describing a custody battle over the hearing child of a deaf couple. "Now people are going to think that deaf people aren't capable of raising a child, just because this couple had issues," said Schiffbauer.

Around the world there are deaf parents, like Shirley and Robert Schiffbauer of Lincoln, who have successfully parented hearing children - like Lisa, Jamie and their brother Jeff.

A common misperception is that the hearing children of deaf parents have trouble learning spoken language. These children usually learn spoken language as a natural part of growing up. And the children intuitively know that these are separate, distinct languages. Olsen said she had never seen anyone simultaneously sign and speak verbally until her adult years when she was around other hearing adults with deaf parents.

Often these friends sign and speak at the same time as they talk to each other.

But this is new. "As kids we spoke to each other and signed to the adults," she said. There is little research in the area, but the work done "suggests that just because a hearing child has parents who are deaf doesn't mean he will have speech or language problems," said Dr. Tim Brackenbury, an assistant professor at Bowling Green State University in Ohio.

"Certainly these kids can have problems, but the research doesn't suggest they will have more problems than any other kids in the population."

In fact, the limited research on toddlers learning two languages, including sign and a spoken language, indicate children are quite successful learning two languages at the same time.

Some earlier research indicated children may experience some delay in speech development as they assimilate two languages, but eventually they would catch up. More recent research indicates no delay.

"The research suggests that if a child has exposure to a second language at least 20 percent of the time, they will develop a second language in a way that most people think is OK," said Brackenbury.

Arthur Trexler, one of two sons born to deaf parents, said his first language was sign language. "I picked up English as my second language," he said. "Actually, I don't remember learning either language," he said. His parents, eager that their sons be fluent in spoken English, spoke and signed everything to their children when they were little. His father's spoken English was very clear. His mother's less so, he said.

The Trexlers, devout Seventh-day Adventists, also home-schooled their boys until junior high school. Trexler did spend one semester in the local church-run school because family friends were concerned the boys weren't getting a good education at home. There was no need to worry. "The school was very easy compared to the program my mother had us on," said Trexler, who uses his fluency in American Sign Language in his job at Boys Town Research Hospital in Omaha. And the two boys spoke to each other at home, while their mom - a proficient lip reader - listened in and stopped them when there was something she didn't understand.

Many adults with deaf parents had common experiences growing up. These common links are described in literature from CODA - or Children of Deaf Adults. It explains other family members -grandparents, aunts, uncles, even older siblings - are often the spoken language models. And the children are relied upon to interpret for their parents, particularly decades ago, before paid interpreters were common. The mailman came to the door, so Beaurivage would translate. "What we did was normal and necessary to help the family function in a normal way," said Beaurivage.

As teens, the children of deaf parents can have special problems adjusting to their family differences. Trexler, now 31, remembers those years. Like any teen, you get to a certain age, 13, 14 or 15, and you don't like your parents, he said. He had extra issues. In addition to being the hearing child of deaf parents, his father was a preacher, which gave Trexler enough issues to make any kid "go haywire" for a while, he said.

And Beaurivage remembers monitoring her friends' reactions to her parents. Those who were not comfortable or who were mocking did not get an invitation back to her house. "I didn't want my parents to be hurt by stupid friends," she said.

But there's also something extra special about being a child living in two cultures - the distinct deaf culture of their parents, with its own language, its own social customs, and the hearing culture. "It's probably like the experience of a child whose parents are from a different country. You learn to live in both cultures, said Olsen, who was raised in Lincoln and now is a medical social worker in Chicago.

"I think that being raised by deaf parents is a blessing," she said. "You learn so much from it."

Ray worked from 1950 on as a journeymen lineman on outside electrical construction. His work took him from places such as Greenland in 1959; Salt Lake City, Utah; Belle Fouche, South Dakota in the early 1960's; Cheyenne, Wyoming, Morrill, Nebraska, and Kimball, Nebraska in the 1960's; in the middle and late 1970's he also traveled to towns such as Ottumwa, Iowa, Denver, Co, Houston, TX. to earn a living.

Ray's work started as a laborer for the old REA in and around Petersburg. The family moved to Omaha where he joined the IBEW and was a union worker for over 40 years. His work ranged for building electrical distribution lines, to high voltage electrical lines that traveled from power plant to distribution centers, to constructing power plants and support facilities for those plants.

During the later years of his career he was fortunate to work along side of his brothers, Danny and John. All three retired from construction in the 1990's and are enjoying retirement in Omaha and Lincoln.

Kate spent a year in Germany. As a high school senior she won a scholarship from the United State Congress and the German Bundestag to cover the cost of the trip. She lived in a small town in the Rhineland wine country, Stephanshausen. Stephanshausen is north of the Rhine river and West of Wiesbaden.

During her stay Kate was able to do some traveling, spending time in Belgium and Berlin. She was also able to spend with our distant relatives in Hermersberg. The time spent in Germany was a great education, she has extended her family with German relatives that she stays in contact with often and has traveled back to see.

CHILD 2 - Jennifer Elaine Faust

I've been pretty focused on the upcoming JDRF One walk, and it's brought this whole experience to the forefront of my mind. It's caused me to think over the whole experience of the last 9 months.

I'll never forget sitting in the bathroom of her hospital room the night she was diagnosed, ugly-crying after she got another battery of finger pokes and injections, she tried to keep a stiff upper lip, but she was scared and in pain and she cried. I realized this was her new reality, like, forever. I barely made it to the bathroom before I lost it, I wanted SO badly to take all of that fear and pain from her, but I was helpless. After I regained most of my composure I sat in her bed and we cried together. I told her how brave she was, WAY braver than Daddy, he ugly cried and HE wasn't the one getting poked!

I look at Ruby with such admiration, she's taken a terribly trying diagnosis and treatment in stride for the most part. What 9 year old would be alright with 14 pokes a day? I know when I was 9 I wasn't pumped about going to the doctor for one! Highs make her jittery, lows make her tummy "wiggly", pokes and site changes are scary and they hurt, but she handles it all like a pro. I've always told her that like all little girls, she's made of sugar and spice and everything nice, BUT she's got steel too. She's showed that steel every single day since diagnosis. My heart is full of pride for her, she is a little warrior, our Wonder Woman.

I think of just how much our lives have changed because of this disease. We spent the first few weeks drinking from the firehose of information, we learned how little we actually knew about Type 1, and we learned the basics of how to keep her safe and healthy, it was overwhelming. Constant math for dosing, checking her bag of supplies before we leave the house even for a quick trip to the store to make sure we were prepared for highs or lows, worries about her going to school or to a friend's house without us, and many sleepless nights watching blood sugar levels. I don't know that I'll ever stop worrying about her, there's just so many tragic stories of T1D kids who have lost the battle. It's a nearly invisible disease, but it's frighteningly dangerous.

I think of the community that has gathered around us, we're blessed to have a great endocrine team right here at Children's, our family is so involved and supportive, they've dove right in to learn how to care for Ruby. So many other T1D families nearby have come out of the woodwork to share experiences and lend a knowing and sympathetic ear. Many friends have been there to give beautiful encouragement or just listening to stories of the day, which at times has been SO needed. I am grateful to each and every one of you who has said a prayer, learned about T1D, given a hug, reached out with kind words, or contributed to the JDRF in Ruby's name.

I'm thankful for the advances in medicine that help Ruby be so much more independent, her glucose monitor allows us to see her levels anywhere at any time, giving us the confidence to let her venture places without is, her pump allows her to dose herself for food. Added bonus, together they take those 14 pokes per day down to about 4 every 10 days. With all of these advancements I'm hopeful that Ruby will see T1D cured in her lifetime! I will never stop supporting groups like JDRF as they work to fund the research that will find that cure!

I'm looking forward to Saturday, seeing friends gather around Ruby to show support, seeing hundreds of little (and not so little) warriors and their families, hearing stories and most of all celebrating Ruby and her strength in the face of this trying disease. It's going to be fun! I know it will be emotional, heck if you're there you might get to see me ugly-cry.

Omaha. Preceded in death by his wife Sharon Faust; son Jeff Faust; 5 brothers; 2 sisters. John is survived by his children, Pam Faust, Jim (Carol) Faust, Lori Faust, Logan, Lilli; 6 grandchildren; 7 great grandchildren; many nieces, nephews and friends.

MEMORIAL SERVICE 11am Thursday, December 2nd with family receiving friends 9-11am all at Braman Mortuary 144th St. Chapel. Inurnment, Private.

"Dad never talked to much about Korea but it's fairly easy to tell you. He got his knee cap blown off while hauling wounded to the " meat wagon" that's his term. He said even after hit he still somehow managed to get others out of the line of fire. He said he was everybody's friend because he had the morphine. He said he laid on the cold frozen ground all nite with one wool blanket. Thought he was gonna freeze to death. Then he was flown to Tokyo then on to Weisbaden, Germany for a long stint in the hospital. His leg was virtually wired together and that is how he lived with it the rest of his life it was stiff for a year. Somehow he bent it I heard several friends say.

Not sure how you stand the pain or how you walk on it but there was nothing they could do for it. I have the letter he wrote grandma after he got hit somewhere. He carried his rosary with him everywhere. He said he had a bugle and short sword tied to his boot but it disappeared when he was wounded. He used to say when he would occasionally watch footage from Korea if you would see that brass bugle and sword tied to his boot it was him. He took them from an enemy soldier that's all I know about that. He worked at the post office in York Ne after he was home and better enough to work."
